Sir,

Why are you like this? Why do you continue to protest everything? If I put a wrong date, you protest it to the Court. I want to know.

You didn't agree with anything I offered. I didn't agree with anything you offered. I had to fix wording to make sure I wasn't putting any words in your mouth. And then I noticed some dates were off because it's now November, when I drafted that APMR in October.

You were not harmed in any way at all. You're now just wasting resources

Hi,

Received. I don't agree to any of these deadlines, etc, and since we disagree with each other, it is best to just file our own separate proposed scheduling orders, per the Court's Order from 10-14.

Thanks

I read it, again, and it wants me to propose to you a draft planning report.

If there was any confusion as to my earlier email to you, I was simply trying to ask you re dates, so we could bypass the waiting and just file a joint stipulation, as the order says.

But I stand by the dates of the last APMR and have attached the old copy.

Sir, I read it. You're not being cooperative. But I will read it for a fourth time. We could have simply filed a joint planning agreement by now, but you keep doing this thing where you dojh want to even work anything out.

I think you should re read the court's order, including the Minute Order where the court explained the procedure for the third time. If you file a report, I will object again.

Matthew,

To prevent another repeat of a non-consent notice, what are the dates you would like in the APMR so that I can file it?
